Accreditation / certification process is expensive

Sharing clinical outcomes will cause problems

Change is not good. It infringes the autonomy

We have been doing it for so long, who are 'they' to tell us what to do?

Patients will come to us irrespective of standards implementation / accreditation

Too much of documentation in the process of quality implementation

Theme: "Enabling professionalism in nursing practice- students' perspectives"

Date: 19.5.2022,

Time: 2.30 to 4.45 pm

Venue: Microsoft Teams

Title of the program: Webinar on "Enabling professionalism in nursing practice- students' perspectives"

Organized by: Sri Ramachandra Faculty of Nursing

Beneficiaries: 626 members

Sri Ramachandra Faculty of Nursing, SRIHER (DU) in collaboration with D Y PATIL University, Mumbai, and Manchester Metropolitan University, UK organized a round table discussion with the theme "Enabling professionalism in nursing practice- students' perspectives" through Microsoft Teams on 19.5.2022 from 2.30 p.m. to 4.45 pm.

The program began with welcome by Dr. Manju C Pallam, Senior Lecturer, Department of Nursing, Manchester Metropolitan University, UK. Totally 15 students, 5 undergraduate students from Sri Ramachandra Faculty of Nursing, SRIHER (DU), 5 undergraduate students from D Y PATIL University, Mumbai, and 5 undergraduate students from Manchester Metropolitan University, UK participated in the session that included discussion on enabling professionalism and how they gained professional behavior through clinical practice and guidance. Totally six questions were asked for the students to discuss in detail about their perspectives and clinical experience towards the same. The following questions were asked;

1. What are the core competencies that demonstrate professionalism in nursing?
2. How would you challenge a senior colleague at your workplace regarding a professional misconduct?
3. How to make difficult decisions in unpredictable circumstance?
4. Why do you think delegation is an integral part of nursing practice?
5. What make nurses different than other health professionals?
6. Why nurses need to maintain professionalism when social networking?

At the end of each question, the students voluntarily participated in the discussion and shared their perspectives and experiences, followed by experts also contributed their viewpoints. INTRODUCTION

The Department of Physiology, SRMC & RI conducted the Online Guest Lecture on 'Cell culture' on 04.12.2021. There has been rapid advances in the understanding and application of cell culture and stem cell technology. Therefore this topic is of great relevance to the physiology post-graduates.

DESCRIPTION OF EVENTS

The Guest Lecture was attended by 10 participants who were postgraduate students from Physiology department of SRMC & RI. The speaker spoke comprehensively on cell culture techniques and her team's research work on stem cells. This session will be of great use to enhance the knowledge and future research activities of the post graduates.

Details of the Scientific Session:

Speaker: Dr. T.N Sathya Prabha,
Professor & HOD,
Department of Neurophysiology,
NIMHANS

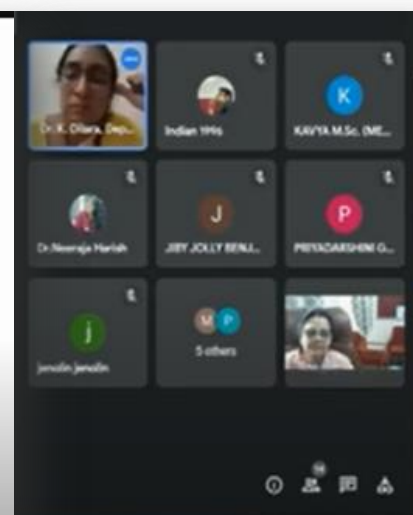

SESSION OUTLINE

Cell culture is the process in which prokaryotic, eukaryotic or plant cells are grown under controlled conditions. Cell culture is useful to study about normal physiology as well as pathogenesis or management of disease. Culture conditions vary as per requirements and need a substrate, growth factors, hormones, gases and a regulated physico-chemical environment. Culture media can be natural or artificial. Biosafety levels can be classified as per risk into 4 levels. Successful culture depends on the phase of cell growth. The speaker also elaborated on the classification of stem cell technology and explained the studies done on ALS using stem cells in her laboratory

Outline of my talk

- Introduction to cell culture
- Basic equipment for cell culture
- Biosafety Levels – BSL
- Types of cell cultures
- Components of cell culture media
- STEM Cell research in our lab

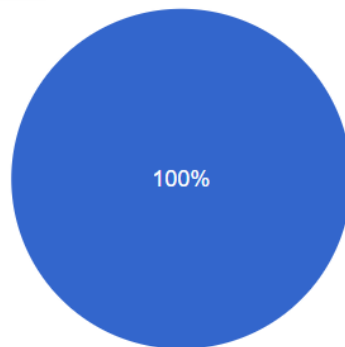

FEEDBACK:

Feedback was collected from the delegates and analyzed. The participants unanimously agreed that it was an informative program and wished to attend many such programs in future.

The learning objectives were clearly stated.
